

For the National Era
THE TRUTH OF HISTORY.

Hon. William H. Seward, Senator Chase, Ohio, and Senator Adams of Mississippi, arrived in the city last evening. Mr. Seward proceeds to Auburn this morning, to spend the Congressional recess with his family; Mr. Adams is on his way to Boston; and Mr. Chase will spend several days in the city, as the guest of David Austin, jr., Esq.

denied its constitutionality. Grenville retorted, by charging upon the opposition of Pitt and his friends, the tumults, and violent resistance of the Americans. In the spirit of certain Pro-Slavery Senators of this day, he exclaimed—"The seditious spirit of the Colonies owes its birth to the faction in this House!" What said the fearless Pitt—what were his

"Under the plan proposed, it will be but two or three years before the Company can dispose of its property in the Territory first occupied—and reimburse itself for its first expenses. At that time—in a State of 70 000 inhabitants, it will possess several reservations of 640 acres each—on which its boarding houses and mill

This resolution was reported to the Senate of New Hampshire in 1848, by Harry Hibbard, at present a Representative in Congress. He has recently stultified himself in voting for the Nebraska bill, though, it is believed, under the influence of very strong inducements. Will New Hampshire stultify itself also? Has it strong inducements to fall from its interests?

arms from the armory, and marched out without orders, going to South Brooklyn, away from the scene of the riot. A collision between the military is feared, as the companies say the Irish troops shall not enter the armory again.

The Americans shut up at Catharine street ferry got over safe.

All is now quiet.

All this is no doubt exaggerated—Ed. Era.
